Neutral grey color and wood grain texture is a classical colour combination that manifests an attitude of modesty. Rows of thickened shelves line up with glass doors, bringing about a sense of structure. Minimalism is also emphasized in the fine details such as its narrow wall cabinet system, simple layout and integrated handle design. The image overall produces the impression of coolness and oozes out an ambience of sharpness.

Notting Hill is another example of a spacious kitchen with PVC coated units and good natural light. Polished surface resonated with titanium golden color tone, just brightens up the room immediately and adds softness to the look. This tends to be more reserved and warm compared to typical industrial styles, allowing it to cover a wide range of interior decorating, being more widely acceptable by people.

The design idea is drawn from Swan Lake by Tchaikovsky; As a ballerina in white dress, with her black veil, enters a moonlit clearing in the forest, there she dances and rises like a magnificent swan in flight. Her swaying dress has stirred up an ever-widening circle of ripples. Shadow falls on the lake, disperses with water until it finally drifts away into the morning haze. It seems that everything is immersed in an air of tranquility and elegance.

The clean door panel and concealed handle become an integrated design. The design of the unique curved door panel makes the kitchens more beautiful. Simple dark green door panels merged with wood grain back panels, present the Scandi-industrial style perfectly. Brand new lacquer material is not only environmentally-friendly, but also practical. And compared to the common lacquer, it's more cost-effective.
